AmeriCorps Programs Communications Toolkit

Social Media

Spending time to use social media to your advantage will yield high returns for your organization. All platforms of social media (Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, Snapchat and others) can help you share information about your organization and build a stronger brand. All programs are strongly encouraged to follow/like/share Volunteer Iowa's social media platforms to stay up-to-date on the latest updates. It is incredibly helpful that you tag Volunteer Iowa when sharing information about your program on social media. (Tagging is simple – just add @VolunteerIowa to a place in the content of your social media post, and we will be notified that you mentioned us!)

We also cannot help you amplify your message without YOU sending US photos (as that also builds engagement), stories and upcoming events, so we can feature these through our social media platforms. Please keep our Communications & Engagement Officer up to date:

betsy.shelton@volunteeriowa.org.

We encourage you to take time and check out the following social media platforms and tools to manage your platforms:

- ✓ Facebook – facebook.com
- ✓ X – x.com
- ✓ Instagram – instagram.com
- ✓ Snapchat – snapchat.com
- ✓ LinkedIn – linkedin.com
- ✓ TikTok – tiktok.com
- ✓ YouTube – youtube.com

Social Media Management Tools:

- ✓ Hootsuite – hootsuite.com
- ✓ SproutSocial – sproutsocial.com
- ✓ MavSocial – mavsocial.com
- ✓ Likeable Hub – likeablehub.com

You can easily find free management tools (like Hootsuite for example) where you can consider what you would like share on social media, and then schedule it in advance. Once complete, you can move on to other work, not having to worry about what is going on socially at that time. Each of these tools provide different 'insights' to what is happening on your social media accounts when a message goes out. It can tell you how many people viewed, if people engaged (liked, commented, shared), or if you were mentioned in another social media platform by someone like Volunteer Iowa. Lastly, they give you an idea, based on your audience (who follows you or likes your pages), when you should concentrate on posting on social media – what time of day and what day is best. If you are going to spend your time on social media, wouldn't you want it to be spent in the best way?

You can always use social media for 'in the moment' posts and tweets, and you can see when the next scheduled message will be going out (so you can reschedule too if needed).

Social Media Content

- Use a hashtag in every tweet, on Facebook and Instagram posts to allow for tracking and retweeting.
- If you sign up for an X account, you can manage your posts easily through a free product like Hootsuite. This allows for you to schedule tweets in advance, as well as tweet about something when needed.
- Facebook allows you to schedule posts in advance, which is a helpful feature. You can also cross-post to Instagram or schedule Instagram-only posts through the Meta Business Suite or Creator Studio.
- Most social media platforms provide you with insights – details into how well your message was received. For example – how many people engaged with your tweet (liked it), or how many people saw your Facebook post? You can also find out the best time of day to reach those who follow you.
- Facebook Live & Instagram stories – consider them! It's easy to do and posts immediately. It's not about having everything neatly buttoned up. It's about the in-the-moment, raw video showcasing AmeriCorps members in action or even the pre-planning for an upcoming meeting or event. Something that others can experience in real time, that also makes things real. Have fun with it!
- Snapchat – consider it as well! Snapchat has a high percentage of 18–34 year-olds using it compared to other social media platforms. If you want to get in front of that audience, spend a bit of time on Snapchat. It is super easy to create filters for events (etc.) by using the 'geofilter'.
- TikTok – The newest of social media platforms, but the best way to reach young people. 62% of US users are aged 10-29. Users spend an average of 52 minutes per day on the app. Get creative on TikTok and see if you can go viral!
- Engagement calendar – consider developing a monthly message theme calendar to help keep your posts focused and engaging.

Website Links:

- Consider including a website link (ideally to your website) on every tweet, Facebook and Instagram post so you can give the reader a way to act upon your request.
- Make sure you add the link as it is, or through bit.ly (created through Twitter). Bitly is a link management platform used primarily by X to shorten a link to a website so that you can stay within the 280 characters limit easier per tweet.
- If you are curious as to how many people are clicking on the link you provide through social media to your website, take time to review Google Analytics (find through Google.com). This is a free tool that can track this information for you and much, much more.

Graphics:

- Consider using photos of AmeriCorps members in action, having fun, and celebrating – make sure to add the AmeriCorps logo to the photo or capture shots with members in AmeriCorps gear (so you can see the logo – keep it visual). You can use an online picture resizer like Squoosh (squoosh.app) for free.
- AmeriCorps.gov does have logos, banners, fact sheets and photos for you to download if you wish. You may want to invest in some additional high quality local photos as well.
- You can create graphics through sites like Canva.com (free) or Snappa.com (free). Creating your own graphics allows for you to share specific information about your programs (data, photo collage, infographics and more – personalize it!). There are lots of tools out there!
- Photos should be ‘action’ based with members engaging volunteers, out in the community, and even with other members. They should have the AmeriCorps logo visible and clear as much as possible. Extra signage at events should be used, as it provides an enhancement to the backdrop of the photo. Photos can be staged as well as candid, to have a good variety.
- Make sure you have photo releases!
- Remember to include a graphic or video on every social media post. It grabs attention and reinforces the AmeriCorps brand. Videos plus links to your hiring post are great together!

Planning/Strategy for social media

Remember that doing all your social media and website work at the last minute will not be very helpful. To really maximize on the opportunity social media presents, you need to plan ahead. Some people create a content calendar monthly, where they record everything that is going on in the upcoming month(s), and then can spend time scheduling posts/tweets about these things in advance. Always leave room to post/tweet about things as they come up. Remember – this is a template designed to help you, and you customize it based on what works for you. If it’s taking up too much time, then consider other options. (example below)

Facebook	Twitter	Pinterest	Instagram	YouTube
Share a link to your latest email	Share a link to your latest email	Create a “20 Gifts Under $20” board	Share a photo of your staff unpacking new holiday inventory	Share a holiday “thank you” video

BRANDING!

Hopefully you know your brand, and you know it well. It's incredibly important in today's world of marketing to have a strong brand. It's not just about getting your target market (who is your message trying to reach) to act, think or behave in a certain way, but it's about getting people to see you as the only provider as the solution to the problem or need you have.

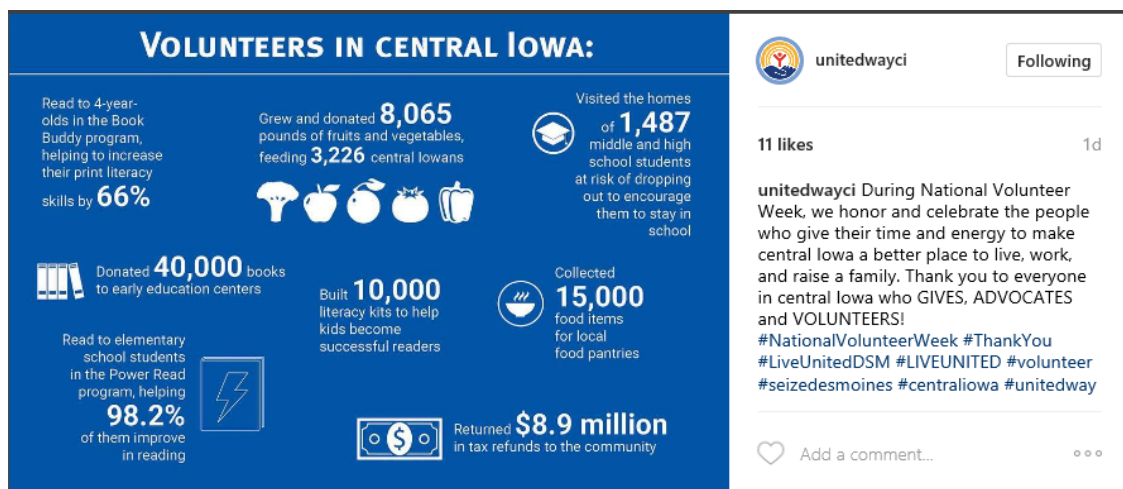

Wikipedia – A 'brand' is defined as a toolbox of marketing and communication methods that help to distinguish a company from competitors and create a lasting impression in the minds of customers.

So, when they hear of your organization, what do they think of? To be successful in your branding efforts, you need to understand what your audience is after and consider strategies on how you will deliver that message. Your brand is the foundational piece to your marketing and communication efforts and you do not want to be without.

When you consider recruitment or storytelling, think of these questions:

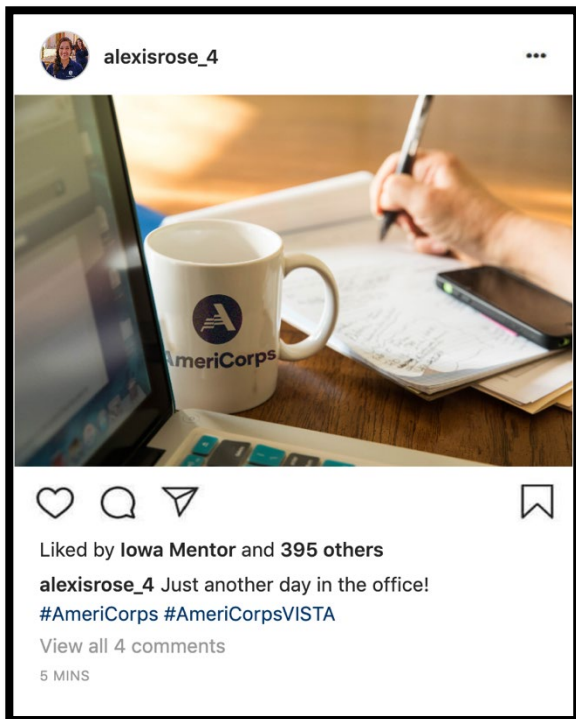

- How does your brand relate to your target audience? Will they understand your message right away without too much 'thought'?
- Are you communicating who you are, what you do?
- Are you sharing why your story/event/employment opportunity is unique?
- Is your brand living up to what you've promised your 'customer' (what to expect when they serve with you; what the media should expect when coming to your events; etc.)?
- Are you being consistent? Be true to your brand and design templates, brand standards, taglines and a 'voice' for your brand – use with everything you do (even email signatures!). Integrate!

Examples of great social media branding:

Commission on Volunteer Service

Again – integrate your brand EVERYWHERE. This doesn’t always mean screaming your logo from the rooftops, but it does mean thinking creatively.

The foundation of your brand is your logo, and your logo helps communicate your brand. It’s critical that you have your own branding guidelines and are considerate of the guidelines of others as well. When creating your marketing toolkit, make sure you know when you should use other logos to enhance your brand and satisfy requirements from partners. If you don’t know, just ask!

Volunteer Iowa Branding Guidelines & Use of Logo

Ask your program officer for a copy of these documents if needed

Acknowledging Volunteer Iowa

Programs must acknowledge “Volunteer Iowa” in all AmeriCorps communication, marketing and media materials, including, but not limited to, publications, press releases, newsletters, emails, websites, and brochures. Continue to use “AmeriCorps” when referencing AmeriCorps the national agency. Websites must post both the program logo (AmeriCorps, AmeriCorps Seniors, etc.) AND Volunteer Iowa logos.

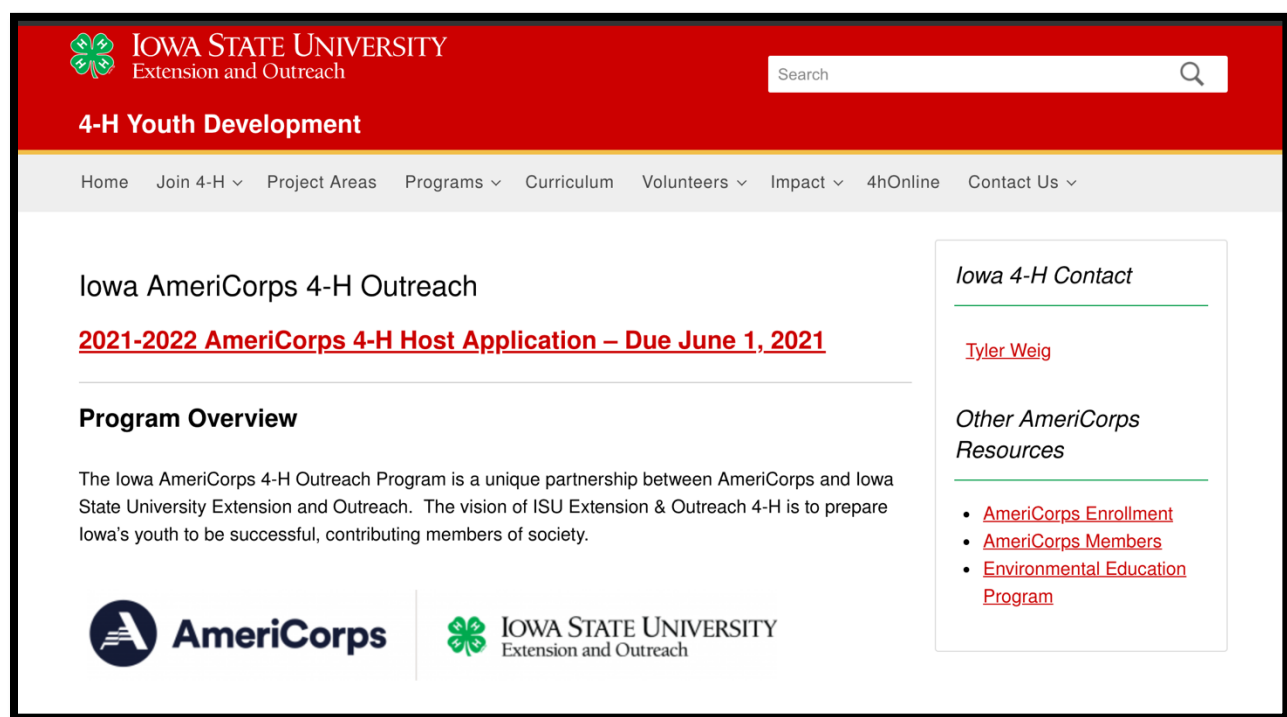

Co-Branding

Co-branding is a really powerful way to introduce your organization's services to someone who is loyal and familiar with another. Both brands benefit from this in a variety of ways. Consider why having the AmeriCorps logo or the Volunteer Iowa logo can help build your brand.

It is important to consider your own branding guidelines and develop co-branding principles before you start creating imagery or randomly placing another logo with your own. You also need to know the branding guidelines of the other you are wanting to co-brand with, as you need to be approaching this relationship with the best interests of both parties in mind.

Website co-branding:

- Use logo to send people to AmeriCorps pages
- Embody AmeriCorps at your organization. Make them feel a part of something bigger
- Include more information about AmeriCorps at your organization
- Describe AmeriCorps and what being an AmeriCorps member looks like for your program

Considerations when ‘pitching’ a story to the local media:

- Who are the local media outlets (television, radio, print)? Do you know anyone that works there? Can someone you know connect you (a board member, staff member, volunteer, alum)?
- Consider how people find out about events happening – think about the audience you are trying to reach. Just as important – think about who the media outlets believe are their target audience(s).
- If you have a local television, paper or radio station – don’t forget about them! Consider writing up PSAs (public service announcements) and ask if they can run those in-kind for you for a short period of time. Sometimes a local station can do this. Additionally, if they are local, they often want local people to interview! Ask for an opportunity to do a live interview or write up an opinion piece for the paper. You can always ‘google’ how to write an opinion piece or letter to the editor.
- Remember it’s about timing. Ask to meet with them in advance of needing anything, and ask them questions about their audience, how they receive press releases, how they want to be communicated with, etc. They will respect you greatly for asking, and it helps you know how and when to reach out. If you continue to send them things that they will not publish because you don’t take the time to find out more, you are hurting your own chances for coverage.
- Remember when writing press releases and other newsworthy items – you must include the Who, What, Where, When, Why and How of the news item. Make it obvious. Keep it simple.
- Lastly, if they do run a story for you – a hand-written thank you goes a long way!

Information is sometimes easy to find – this was accessible on this publication’s website:

Want to get the Business Record's attention?

You could tweet us, call us or post on our Facebook page, but in truth, the best way to get your news to us is to send it to to our new email address: newsroom@bpcdm.com. Please help us to help you by taking a second to add this new email address to your press release list. We have three news beasts to feed every day, and your news tips, releases and story ideas help us do that. First, our morning and afternoon Business Record daily e-newsletters, which are sent around 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. daily and contain short summaries of the business news of the day and local items of interest to Greater Des Moines business readers.

Second is our website, www.BusinessRecord.com. We post timely business news on the site at any time of the day. So, even if your news has missed our daily e-newsletter deadlines, don’t hesitate to send it to us.

Lastly, we’re always looking for ideas for our weekly newsmagazine, the Business Record, which is published every Friday and contains in-depth analysis and trend stories, new initiatives and projects and coverage of the people driving the business community.

If you’re interested in pitching a story idea for an article in the newsmagazine, we need a bit more lead time, and it’s always best to hear from you at least two weeks in advance for stories of a time sensitive nature. Emailing or calling me at 515-661-6081 can be a good starting point for print stories, or you can directly contact the reporter who covers your industry.

Thanks in advance for the help, helping us better cover the Des Moines business community. - Chris Conetzkey, Business Record Editor

Hosting a Public Event

Volunteer Iowa strongly encourages programs to identify and invite the Volunteer Iowa Commissioners and staff, local elected officials, local media, business partners and community partners to ensure an active event that shows the strength of the statewide partnership. Programs should consider designating 1 or 2 spokespersons at each event that are familiar with core messaging, communication, and the elevator speech for consistent messaging.

These items should be included at or take place at public events:

- AmeriCorps Logos, Signage, and Clothing (required)
- Introduction of stakeholders and any elected officials in attendance
- Testimonials
- Presentation
- Information Packet with Statistics & Business Cards
- Photo Opportunities
- Sponsor logos on printed materials

Event ideas

There are several opportunities in a calendar year where you could hold an event, reach out to the local media, and find ways to tell the story of National Service. Below are a few ideas for events:

- Martin Luther King Jr. Day
- AmeriCorps Week
- National Volunteer Week
- Mayor and County Recognition Day for National Day of Service
- Global Youth Service Day
- Swearing-in Day for your AmeriCorps members

Headline (short, and in Title Case, ideally 170 characters or less)

Summary (synopsis of the press release. Tells the story in a different way, doesn't repeat headline)

CITY, Iowa – The first paragraph is the “lead” and contains the most important information. Grab the reader’s attention here – don’t assume that they have read the headline or the summary line. The lead should stand on its own.

The body of the release has short sentences and paragraphs (about three or four lines per paragraph). The first paragraph should cover the 5 Ws.

The rest of the press release expands on the information provided in the lead paragraph. This includes why the story is significant. Here you answer the questions “so what” and “how.”

“Include a quote to personalize the content” said First Name Last Name, title and organization. Quotes can come from key staff, partners, or subject matter experts.

The last paragraph should restate and summarize the key points. It can also be used to share details on an event, where to get more information, or a call to action.

Recruiting for AmeriCorps Positions

Sometimes recruitment for open National Service positions can be tricky. Your posting might go up and many applicants apply. Other times you can struggle to find enough candidates or the right person for the role. Since recruitment comes with much uncertainty, this section is to help you possibly think of ways to approach recruitment that perhaps you aren't already thinking of, and/or enhance your recruitment plan.

Disclaimer – you may have other methods to recruitment not listed below that work well for you, and that is wonderful. This is not meant to steer you away from what works well for you or not be sensitive to the uniqueness within your community. This is merely to spark thought and be a resource.

Questions to consider when looking to fill an open position:

- Where do you post locally for jobs? Where should you post online for jobs?
- How do you reach college students? Is there a campus near you?
- Do people in your community still look for jobs through any printed media? Flyers?
- Who can help you spread the word about your open position?
- Can you afford $20 or less to post your open position on social media through an ad? You can target specific demographics that way.
- Are you using social media to tell others that you have an open position? Can you tag those that could help by sharing your post/tweet?
- If your posting isn't bringing in candidates, have someone else outside the organization look at it. Maybe it isn't as compelling or speaking to the intended audience.
- Can you include testimonials in your posting? Can alums help you spread the word?

Be creative with your posting!

We know there are basic requirements and grant compliance you need to include in your position description, but that shouldn't limit you to just posting what is required for the job. Think creatively and outside the box to make the position interesting. Consider who your target audience would be for the position and write in a way that would/could appeal to them. If you've posted a position before and struggled finding applicants, maybe it's because it didn't sound interesting! If in doubt, have a current member review it (or an alum) before you post it. Maybe they can help you with the content that could get someone excited to apply for your open position. If you post your position and don't get the response you are after, try writing it differently.
